The present Karnataka was scattered among various principalities before integration. Apart from establishing political supremacy during the later part of 18th century, the British exploited the people in agriculture and trade in order to protect their own interests. These exploitations created insecurities across Karnataka. The local kings suffered insecurities. As a result, rebellions against the British broke out in most parts of the Karnataka. In the beginning, the Zamindars and Kings battled against the British individually without attaining unity among them.

Wodeyars of Mysore (1399-1947)

Mysore state continued the tradition and revived the lost glory of Karnataka after the fall of Vijaya Nagara empire.

Hadinadu a Paleyapattu near Mysore town was ruled by Chamaraja a feudatory of Srirangapattana Mandalika. He died without any sons and the dalvoy Maranayaka of Karugalli administered it and demanded the princess in marriage to him. Nobody agreed for it.

At this time Yaduraya with his brother Krishnaraya from Dwaraka of Gujarath came to Mysore. Voluntarily he came to help the Maharani and killed Maranayaka. This pleased the Maharani who gave her daughter in marriage to him. Thus the Wodeyar dynasty was started. This dynasty was ruled by 25 Wodeyars starting from Yaduraya to Jayachamaraja Wodeyar. Let us understand some of the important Wodeyars.

Raja Wodeyar (1578-1617) : The credit of expanding the small paleyapattu into a large Mysore goes to him. Srirangapattana was captured from the representative of Vijayanagara and made it as his Capital. Further the Surrounding areas were occupied and expanded his Kingdom.

He revived the temples of Srirangapattana, Mysore and Melukote "Rajamudi" the crown was offered to lord Cheluvanarayana Swamy. He started the Navaratri (Dasara) festival of Mysore province in Srirangapatna.

Chikkadevaraja Wodeyar (1673-1704) : He was an efficient soldier and administator. He checked the invasion of Shivaji at Madurai, Ikkeri and Bijapur. He captured Magadi, Madhugiri, Koratagere and other places. He purchased Bangalore from the Mughal military general. He had the titles like Karnataka 'Kavichakravarthi', 'Aprathima veera', 'Thenkanaraja' and 'Navakoti Narayana'. He started the council of ministers (Athara Kacheri) to help in administration. The postal system came into being during his time. A dam was constructed across river cauvery and Chikka Devaraja and Dodda Devaraja Canal were also constructed for irrigation. He had patronised many poets like Thirumalarya, Sanchi Honnamma and so on.

The Rule of Commissioners (1831-1881)

After the death of Tippu Sultan, Krishnaraja Wodeyar III ascended the throne with the consent of the British. The British took Mysore state under their direct control in 1830 due to the rebel at Nagara (Shivamogga District) The period between 1831 to 1881 is called the rule of commissioners. During this period, Krishnaraja Wodeyar repeatedly tried to regain power. Finally, the government of England in 1867. took a decision to return Mysore to the Wodeyars family. There was a condition added in this decision. The condition was that only the successor of Krishnaraja Wodeyar III would be considered for the throne but not Krishnaraja Wodeyar III. The very next year of this information, Krishnaraja Wodeyar died in 1868. His Successor Chamaraja the X ascended the throne when he reached adulthood. Seven commissioners administered the state between 1831-1881.

The important among them were Mark Cubbon and L.B. Bowring who ruled for 27 years and 8 years respectively. During the adminstrative period of Cubbon, English education, Judiciary and many other fields were modernised. The reforms of two commissioners made a long term impact on Mysore state. The last commissioner James Gordon handed over the administration to Mysore royal family in 1881.

Chamarajendra Wodeyar X (1881-1894) : As per the promise made by the British, the Mysore throne was handed over to Chamarajendra X in 1881. The Commissioners rule came to an end and a British Resident was appointed. Along with this, C. Rangacharlu was appointed as dewan. He was an efficient administrator and liberal minded. He established the Mysore Representative Assembly. Gold mines in Kolar in 1881, Bangalore - Mysore Railway line in 1882 were also started.

After the death of Rangacharlu in 1883, K. Sheshadri Iyer became the dewan. As he had a vast experience of having worked in different positions, he was responsible for many new railway lines. In order to select the talented youngsters for various administrative positions, he started the Mysore civil services examinations. Because of his efforts "The Mysore infant Marriages Prevention Regulation." was implemented in 1894. Shimsha Hydro - Electric Power Project was started.

During the period of Chamaraja the X more importance was given to irrigation. Special importance to girls education was given by establishing 'Maharani Girls High School'. Chamarajendra Wodeyar gave shelter to Vivekananda when he came to Mysore and also helped him to participate in the parliament of world religions at Chicago. As he had love towards Kannada and Sanskrit, he patronised many scholars. Basappa shastry was important among them who had written many books and was known as "Abhinava Kalidasa" and has composed the State Anthem of Mysore, Kayo Sri Gowri.

Krishnaraja Wodeyar IV (1894-1940) : The queen regent Vanivilasa Sannidana Kempa Nanjammanni looked after the administration. She was helped by the dewans and the advisory council which led for developmental works. Reforms in Gold mines, establishment of colleges, construction of Marikanive reservoir, Railways, Hospitals and Hydro electric project across Cauveri at Shivanasamudra were started. Electricity was supplied to Kolar Gold mines and to Bangalore. The first city to be electrified in India was Bangalore.

Krishnaraja Wodeyar IV assumed power legally in 1902. He was lucky to have the illuminary services of the dewans like P.N. Krishnamurthy, V.P. Madhava

Krishnaraja
Wodeyar IV

Rao, Sir M. Visvesvarayya, Kantharaja Urs, Sir Albion Banerjee, Sir Mirja Ismail and others.

The progressive visionary of Krishna Raja Wodeyar IV had efficient administration of his Diwans made the Mysore State to become one of the leading provinces in the nation. He was very much interested in spreading education among his people. He abolished fees in all primary schools to develop primary education. He helped girls education. He started the university of Mysore and also started scholarship to the students continuing education in foreign countries. In 1909 the Indian Institute of Science was established at Bangalore with the help of Tata. Special attention was given to the development of Irrigation. A barrage was constructed across Cauvery near Belagola. New railway lines were laid. Many small and large scale industries were started. Among them the Iron and Steel Factory, Cement Factory, Paper mills at Bhadravathi, Sugar Factory at Mandya. Sandal oil factory at Mysore, Soap factory at Bangalore. Chemical and Fertilisers factory at Belagola and so on. Legislative council was formed which was a great step in the Legislative measures.

Krishnaraja Wodeyar IV was a man of simple mild natured and efficient administrator. He had a lot of interest towards fine arts and encouraged musicians like Shyama sastry, M. Hirianna, Veena Seshanna, Sambayya, Bidaram Krishnappa, Muttaiah Bhagavatar, Vasudevacharya, T. Chowdaiah and others. Mysore became a 'Model State' due to his administration. Mahatma Gandhiji called him 'Rajarsi'.

Jayachamaraja Wodeyar (1940-1950) : He came to throne after the death of Krishnaraja Wodeyar. He had his education in general and Special colleges. He toured the world and got good Knowledge. He had the services of Dewan Mirza Ismail, Nyapathi Madhava rao and Arcot Ramaswamy Mudaliar.

He was a great scholar, musicologist, orator and a great patron of literature and fine arts. He had written number of books and also composed many devotional songs. He became the governor of Mysore after India became Independent.

Opposition to British Rule in Karnataka

In Indian History the 18th century was considered as "The century of political problems." There were many reasons for this. The death of Aurangzeb, the Mughal emperor in 1707 was the main reason. His death weakened the Mughal empire. As a result the Mughal lost political control over South India. A lot of political struggles took place in Carnatic region. In this backdrop, British tightened their political grip over India. India underwent many political transitions. The native rulers opposed British in many ways.

Hyder Ali and Tippu Sultan

The death of Chikkadevaraj Wodeyar in 1704 created various political challenges in Mysuru state. His death created the problems of succession and administration. All these developments clouded the politics of Mysuru. Hyder Ali gained prominence in this scenario of uncertainty that clouded over the Mysuru and Carnatic region. Hyder Ali soon became popular in using arms and experiments. He undertook the invasion of the forces by active military operations and suppressed Dalvoys. He imprisoned Krishna Raja Wodeyar II and kept him under house arrest and took over the power. He became famous as Nawab Hyder Ali in a short time. This situation was timely utilised by both the French and the English for their political power.

Anglo - Mysore Wars (1767-1799)

First Anglo-Mysore War :

This was started in 1767 and ended in 1769. The prominence gained by Hyder Ali in the South was not tolerated by the British, Marathas and the Nizam of Hyderabad. Hence, the British started devising cunning plans to defeat Hyder Ali whom they saw as an impediment for the expansionist ideas. Though, Hyder Ali suffered political and financial loss due to the Maratha aggression, he made attempts to have Marathas and Nizam of Hyderabad on his sides with a little success.

Hyder Ali

The British entered into an agreement with the Marathas and the Nizam of Hyderabad against Hyder Ali. A tripartite alliance emerged. But, Hyder Ali with manipulative ideas was successful in breaking the alliance. He also created enmity and distrust among the Marathas, the Nizam of Hyderabad and the British.

Meanwhile, political disturbances emerged in Arcot. In 1767, Hyder Ali and the Nizam of Hyderabad attacked Arcot. But the King of Arcot had an alliance with the British. The war started with this incident. The battles took place in Thiruchanapalli, Thiruvannamalai, Ambur and other places. Hyder Ali organized lightning attacks in these battles. The British military captured a few places. Hyder Ali suffered temporary setbacks. The British Military from Bombay joined the war. Hyder Ali considered the war as a challenge to his personal power, and continued with the war. His army reached Madras by 1769 and created panic among the British. Inevitably, the British entered an agreement with Hyder Ali through the 'Madras Treaty'. The first Anglo-Mysore War ended with the signing of the 'Madras Treaty in 1769'.

Second Anglo-Mysore War (1780-1784) :

The Madras Treaty had put the political developments in South India on a temporary hold. The British attempted to break the 'Madras Treaty'. When Madhava Rao attacked Srirangapattana with the Maratha army, Hyder Ali expected the British to support him as per the Madras Treaty. But, the British rejected the request of Hyder Ali and went against the Madras Treaty. Mahe, the French colony was under the hold of Hyder Ali. The British attacked Mahe and captured it. This became the reason for Second Anglo-Mysore War.

The Second Anglo-Mysore war was started in 1780. In the beginning, Hyder Ali gained upper hand. He captured many forts of the Carnatic region. Kanchipuram was captured by Hyder Ali. The Mysore army reached till Coramandal coast. The British officers became worried. Hyder Ali attacked Arcot and captured it. He also threatened to attack Wandiwash and Vellore. An army was kept in standby by the British and it was led by Sir Eyre coot. He followed Hyder Ali's army till Pondicherry. The French refused to support Hyder Ali against the British. Hyder Ali changed his war strategy with this development. He attacked regions under British control and captured a large booty of arms and wealth.

In 1781 Hyder Ali was defeated in a battle held in Porto Nova by the British. This increased the confidence of the British and also changed the direction of the battle. But they suffered financial setbacks in Pulicat and Solingur. Meanwhile, by entering into the 'Salbai Agreement', the British were successful in winning over the Marathas and the Nizam of Hyderabad to their side. Hyder Ali died due to illness during the war in 1782. The war was led by his son Tippu Sultan.

Tippu Sultan was waging war in Malabar region when Hyder Ali died. The British tried to take advantage of Hyder Ali's death by invading Mangalore and Bidanoor. They also tried to instigate the rulers of Calicut and Malabar regions against Tippu Sultan. Tippu Sultan thought of all these developments and decided to protect Mangalore and the coastal regions. He defeated the British. The 'Treaty of Mangalore' ended the Second Anglo-Mysore War in 1784.

Tippu Sultan

Tippu Sultan felt that the British were the major obstacle for his policy of expansion. So, he tried to drive them out seriously. He became the ruler of Mysore after Hyder Ali's death. He understood the cunning policies of the British. He considered it as his duty to drive the British out of India. He waged war against the British throughout his seventeen years of rule. He had clearly understood the cunningness, strategies, clever manipulations of the British. He knew that hurting the business interest of the British would weaken the political strength of the British. He tried to organize the enemies of the British into one group. He tried to break the monopoly of the British over trade with India. These attempts further angered the British and their enmity with Tippu Sultan grew up.

Tippu Sultan

Know this :

Among all the attempts done during 18th century to stop the British, the efforts of Hyder Ali and Tippu Sultan stand out due to many aspects. They knew that they could not defeat the British with their traditional arms. Hence, they modernized their army. The soldiers of Mysore Army were capable of using modern weapons and do drills like the European armies. Hyder Ali and Tippu Sultan used missiles during the war for the first time in India. Apart from modern weapons, both of them knew that they needed funds in their treasury for the battles. Hyder Ali had witnessed many Nawabs going bankrupt while waging war against the British. So, both of them took measures to strengthen their economic system by entering into various agreements and trade pacts. They brought tobacco, sandalwood and others under the state monopoly. They invited French experts to improve the quality of traditional artifacts of Mysore in order to gain better market share at international markets.

Third Anglo-Mysore War :

The political situation of Travancore was the main reason for this war. The king of Travancore built a fort in Kochi with the help of the British and captured Ayacotta and Kanganoor forts from the Dutch. All these were the clear breach of Mangalore Treaty.

The British captured Karwar, Coimbatore, Dindigul and other regions under the leadership of General Meadows. Tippu Sultan entered the region of Baramahal and captured Sathyamangalam. He later attempted to capture Thiruchanapalli but failed in his attempt. Meanwhile, Lord Cornwallis took over the leadership of the British Army and this changed the course of the war.

The British Army captured Kolar and Hosakote and rushed towards Bangalore under the leadership of Lord Cornwallis. The army captured Bangalore and destroyed the fort. After capturing Bangalore, Lord Cornwallis sought the help of Marathas and Nizam of Hyderabad to defeat Tippu Sultan. The war took another conclusive turn with the joining of the Marathas and Hyderabad forces with the British. The Marathas captured Savanoor, Gajendraghad, Lakshmeshwara, Hubballi and other places.

The combined army marched towards Srirangapattana by capturing fort after fort in 1792. The fort was destroyed during night. Disturbed by these developments, Tippu Sultan tried to enter into an agreement with the British. It was inevitable for him. He signed the 'Treaty of Srirangapatna' in 1792 which had unfavourable conditions. With this, Third Anglo-Mysore War came to an end.

The British were successful in inserting unfavourable conditions in order to weaken Tippu Sultan. Tippu was forced to part with half of his kingdom, was forced to pay three crore rupees as war damage fee and had to pledge two of his sons as a guarantee against the payment. He was also forced to release the prisoners of war. The British withdrew the combined army from Srirangapatna.

Fourth Anglo-Mysore War :

Tippu Sultan took the defeat in the Third Anglo-Mysore war personally. He paid off all the dues and got his children released. He also gave away the territory to the British and its allies as agreed. He claimed his right over the Malabar regions under the British occupation. But, the British refused this argument.

Lord Wellesley became the Governor General of India in 1798. The political activities against Tippu Sultan became intensified during this period. Tippu's attempt to form an alliance of local rulers and his closeness with the French angered Lord Wellesley further. Tippu sent an ambassador to France to seek the alliance of the French. This enraged the British. They thought that an alliance between France and Tippu Sultan would threaten the existence of the British in India's.

Another treaty, Subsidiary Alliance containing inhuman and impractical conditions was forced upon Tippu Sultan. Tippu rejected this. His refusal started the Fourth Anglo Mysore War.

Mysore after Tippu

The war started in 1799. The British were able to destroy the strong Srirangapatna fort. Tippu died while fighting the British in 1799. With the death of Tippu Sultan, the British were happy as if the whole India came under their rule. Most of the territories under Tippu's rule was shared among the British, the Marathas and the Nizam of Hyderabad. A small territory was handed over to the royal representative of Mysore Wodeyars. This region came to be known as Mysore Princely State.

Dondiya Wagh (1800)

Many rebellions and protests against the British took place in Karnataka after the death of Tippu Sultan. These were armed rebellions and took place during the first part of 19th century. Among them, the rebellion led by Dondiya Wagh is an important rebellion.

Dondiya was born in a Maratha family of Chennagiri. He was called the Wagh, the tiger, due to his bravery. Wagh means tiger in Marathi language. In 1779 he started his career as a cavalry soldier in Hyder Ali's army and grew to the position of a military general. He built his own private army and fought along with Tippu Sultan. Due to differences with Tippu, he was imprisoned. The British released him from the prison after the Fourth Anglo-Mysore War. He built a small army and started his operations. He organized the army with the unhappy soldiers of Tippu's army and the feudatory rulers who had lost power. He captured Bidanoor and Shivamogga forts and made unsuccessful attempt to capture Chitradurga fort. Lord Wellesley tried to check this rebellion.

An attack was organized on Shivamogga, Honnali, Harihara and other places under the control of Dondiya. Dondiya lost his base. After the capture of Shikaripura, Dondiya ran away towards Gutti, which was under the control of the Nizam of Hyderabad. When the Nizam's army attacked Gutti, Dondiya had to run towards the regions of the Marathas. The Maratha army attacked him and captured most of his horses, camels and arms. In spite of these, he continued his war fare.

Many unhappy palyegars encouraged Dondiya Wagh. The French at Mahe of Malabar also extended their support to him. The British army followed him in the vast area that included Harihara, Chitradurga, Shikaripura, Savanuru, Ranebennur, Kittur and Londa. The British who took over Shirhatti killed many followers of Dondiya Wagh.

End of Dondiya Wagh :

Lord Wellesley decided to end the adventures of Dondiya Wagh. The British requested the help of local rulers. Dondiya had recaptured Shikaripura fort and he was scattered by the British army again. The British tried to defeat the army of Dondiya which used to move in the area between Tungabadhra and Malaprabha. They attacked him from all the directions. He was followed by them when he left Raichur. When he was caught in between Maratha Army and Nizam's army, the British attacked him near Yapalaperavi and killed him at Konagal. With the death of their leader, the followers of Dondiya scattered. The British captured a large scale of arms and ammunitions.

Rebellion of kittur – Brave Queen Chennamma (1824)

The British brought in many changes in the administration after defeating the Marathas, Tippu and Hyder Ali. Denying the right of adopted children over the throne was one of such rules. Though Dalhousie introduced 'The Doctrine of lapse' in 1848, they followed such a principle much before in the case of Kittur without any legal sanctity. Kittur became victim of this policy. The rebellion led by Chennamma, the queen of Kittur opposing this law is a prominent one.

Chennamma

Kittur lies between the Dharwad and Belagavi. After the death of her husband Mallasarja, Chennamma, the queen of Mallasarja took active interest in the administrative matters. After the death of Mallasarja, his son Shivalingarudra Sarja took over the reign of Kittur. Due to his failing health, Chennamma had to take care of day to day administration. Shivalinga Sarja supported the British during the Maratha war. As a result, the British entered into an agreement with Kittur and collected payment from him. This agreement was entered into during the time of Thomas Munroe.

After the death of Shivalingarudra Sarja, Chennamma adopted a boy named Shivalingappa and started ruling Kittur as a queen regent. Then, Thackeray was the Collector and political agent of the British in Dharwad. He sent a report to the Governor of Bombay and attempted to take over Kittur Kingdom under the Doctrine of Lapse policy. He attempted to take over the treasury and fort under his control. Chennamma considered war as inevitable. She prepared for the war. Meanwhile the British also prepared themselves for the war. In the battle, Thackeray was shot dead. Many British were taken as the prisoners of war.

The British attacked Kittur again under the leadership of Colonel Deak. The army fought the battle bravely. Chennamma attempted to flee from the battle field. But she was captured by the British army. Chennamma and others were imprisoned at Bylahongala fort. Queen Chennamma passed away in the prison. She has remained an ideal person till today.

Sangolli Rayanna (1829-30)

The name of Sangolli Rayanna has remained famous along with the name of Rani Chennamma. Rayanna was a brave soldier. He fought for the independence of Kittur and felt it was his duty to liberate his motherland. He fought against the British and was imprisoned along with her. He was later released by the British.

Sangolli Rayanna

There are many oral histories about Rayanna. He developed a sense of nationalism and went on organizing an army. He organized secret meetings at sensitive places. He aimed at looting the treasury and taluk offices of the British. He had an army of five hundred men. He became furious with the villagers who were assisting the British army. The British thought that Rayanna was being instigated by Rani Chennamma. Hence, they shifted Chennamma to Kusugal prison from Bylahongala.

The British devised a cunning strategy to capture Rayanna. They encouraged Desais who were opposing Rani Chennamma. An Amaldar named Krishnaraya joined hands with them. Thus, Rayanna was cunningly captured and brought down to Dharwad. Many of his soldiers surrendered after his arrest. He was declared as a main offender and was hanged to death at Nandagadh on 26th January in 1831. Many ballads have kept the life and bravery of Rayanna alive even today.

Rebellion of Amara Sullya

This rebellion was basically a farmers' rebellion. This rebellion needs to be understood in the backdrop of political situations prevalent in coastal Karnataka and Kodagu regions during 1835-37. The British dethroned the ruler of Kodagu, Chikkaveerarajendra of Haleri dynasty in 1834. He was later transferred to Vellore through Bangalore and later to Kashi. This incident created political insatiability in Kodagu. Swami Aparampara, Kalyanaswamy and Puttabasappa organized a rebellion against this. All the three declared that they were part of the Haleri dynasty that ruled Kodagu. Swami Aparampara assumed the leadership of the rebellion. He was captured in 1834 and shifted to Bangalore. Similarly Kalayanaswami was captured in 1837 and placed in Mysore prison.

Puttabasappa:

The people of lower Kodagu continued the rebellion after the capture of Kalyanaswamy. Sullia, Bellare and Puttur, the major places of Canara region, were part of Amara Sullia. It is interesting to note that a farmer named Puttabasappa, as Kalyanaswamy. This Puttabasappa later presented himself as Swami Aparampara. This also notes the fluid nature of the rebellion. Puttabasappa took over the leadership of the rebellion.

The rebellion started in the hilly region. Puttabasappa organized the rebels and calmed down the people. He declared that tax on tobacco and salt will be withdrawn, if the rebel government assumed power. The rich farmers, land owners and local chieftains were assured of this move. The capture of the government office in Bellare was the first move in this rebellion. Puttabasappa killed an Amaldhar who was known for his brutality. This further increased the popularity of Puttabasappa. This incident gained more support for the rebellion and the rebellion became more famous.

The rebels marched towards Mangalore to capture it. The British were engaged in fortifying their fort in Mangalore. The rebels marched towards Mangalore through Panemangalore and Bantwal. They looted the treasury and prison of Bantwal.

The British sought the army of Thalacheri, Cannanore and Bombay to quell this uprising. On hearing this development, Puttabasappa and his associates fled towards Sullia. The British captured them with the help of people in Kodagu. Puttabasappa, Lakshmappa, Bangarasa, Kedambadi Ramayiah Gowda and Guddemane Appaiah were hanged to death. Though the rebellion failed, it has an important place in the history of rebellions against the British.

Rebellion of Surapura and Koppal :

Surapura

Surapura is Located in present Yadgir District. This was an important place since the rule of Aurangazeb of Mughuls. During the reign of the Nizam of Hyderabad and the Marathas it became a vassal state. Later, most of the territory was lost and Surapura remained restricted to a smaller territory. During the reign of Venkatappa Nayaka, it raised a flame of rebellion against the British.

Venkatappa Nayaka:

Venkatappa came to the throne after the death of his father Krishna Nayaka. He was born in 1834 and came to the throne at early age. His ascendance to throne was opposed by Krishna Nayaka's brother Peddanayaka. This resulted in internal struggles. The British interfered in the affairs of Surapura. In 1842, they appointed Meadows Taylor as their Resident and gained proxy power over Surapura.

Taylor was a reformist. He developed Surapura princely state. Peddanayaka was appointed as the Dewan of the state. Taylor conducted the land survey of the kingdom. The revenue of the state increased due to the measures implemented by Taylor. He took measures to educate Venkatappa Nayaka properly. He came to power in 1853.

Rebellion of Surapura

The British government was observing the various developments of Surapura. In 1857, it came to the notice of government that the representatives of Nana Saheb were present in Surapura. This made the British suspicious of King's intentions. The British appointed an officer named Campbell to report on the various activities of the King. The officer submitted a report to the resident of Hyderabad that the King is involved in maladministration.

Venkatappa Nayaka is usually presented as the leader of 1857 revolt in Karnataka by the historians. The British army captured Surapura in 1858. The war continued, there is confusion regarding Venkatappa Nayaka's end.

Veerappa of Koppal

Koppal rebellion is an important rebellion in the various armed rebellions against the British. Koppal and the surrounding regions were under the rule of the Nizam of Hyderabad. There were exploitations. This enraged a few Zamindars who rebelled against the Nizam. Veerappa was an important person among the rebels.

Veerappa who was a Zamindar, rebelled against the British and occupied the fort of Koppal and other forts in the vicinity. Many farmers and Zamindars supported after realizing his motives. The British contacted the Nizam and employed their army to defeat Veerappa. Veerappa who had lesser soldiers died fighting the army of the British. The British captured back the fort of Koppal. Though, this rebellion was a short-lived one, Veerappa proved himself to be a good warrior.

Rebellion of Bedas of Halagali

Halagali is a small village of Mudhol taluk of Bagalkote district. This was part of the Mudhol principality. In 1857, the British banned the usage of weapons. The Bedas who always kept guns as part of their customs were good hunters. They rebelled against the British when they were asked to surrender their firearms. The Bedas of Manturu, Boodni, Alagundi and neighbouring villages joined Halagali Bedas. The British army entered Halagali village to suppress the rebellion. They suppressed the Bedas in an inhuman way. All the rebels were hanged to death.

Know this :

Arms act : Indians were not allowed to possess the weapons without the permission of the government.
